MILITARY HISTORY BOOKS

McFARLAND

Our author James Arness was best known for playing U.S. Marshall Matt Dillon of Dodge City on Gunsmoke. Well before Arness became one of the icons of twentieth-century television, he was entering college just as World War II began. He dreamed of becoming a naval aviator. It seemed as if every night his fraternity was having a party to send off a brother to the service. Young Arness got his interview with a naval flight program officer, but his hopes vanished as he was informed that his six-foot-seven-inch height disqualified him automatically.

Immediately after, he wrote his draft board asking that they call him up as soon as possible. Before being shipped “over there,” like many other young American men during World War II, couldn’t wait to get overseas and fight for his country. James Arness was assigned as a buck private to the 2nd Platoon, E Company (rifle), 2nd Battalion in the 7th Regiment (“Cotton Balers”) of the famed 3rd Infantry Division. As a replacement soldier at Monte Cassino, Italy, he witnessed brutal fighting and killing. He and his comrades remained anxious to join in, but their zeal took on a more sober tone. Arness wrote:

When troops prepare for war there is not much time for quiet reflection, but on a January day in 1944 I made what time I could. With bagpipes playing as we marched down the streets of Naples to our landing craft, I tried to keep my mind apart to think about my life so far.

Many hours later we were lying off the port city of Anzio, ready to storm the beaches of Italy. We heard our craft’s engines revving up; then we moved out toward our assigned beaches. As we waited for incoming fire, I tried to concentrate on images of home. So much that was unknown and frightening lay ahead, while behind me lay everything I knew and everyone I loved. I kept the pictures in my mind for as long as I could.

While later his six-foot-seven-inch height would help him strike a commanding figure as Marshall Dillon, because of his stature, he was chosen to be first off the landing craft (to test the depth of the water) when his division landed at Anzio, Italy. During a night patrol on February 1, 1944, he was wounded by enemy machine gun fire and spent eighteen months recovering in overseas and stateside hospitals. When he left the war behind him, he wore a Combat Infantry Badge, the Purple Heart, his campaign medals, and, eventually, a Bronze Star.

The character Arness played on Gunsmoke for two decades took on mythic proportions—a born leader, honest and strong. Rare is the actor who has been cast in a role that so deeply fit his true self. Arness, who passed on June 3 of this year, gave a full account of his early years, his family, his military career and his film work in Hollywood in his James Arness: An Autobiography (p.11, available in luxury library edition, large print edition, and ebook).

Let’s read some good books.

The Boys of Diamond Hill

The Lives and Civil War Letters of the Boyd Family of Abbeville County, South Carolina

EDITED BY J. KEITH JONES

FOREWORD BY

RICHARD B. MCCASLIN

In April 1861, brothers Daniel and Pressley Boyd left their farm in Abbeville County, South Carolina, to join the Confederate army. The Civil War soon swept their other brothers, William, Thomas and Andrew, as well as brother-in-law Fenton Hall into service. By the war's end, only Daniel survived. The extensive collection of letters the Boyds left behind details their experiences across almost every theater of the war and offers commentary on many aspects of soldier life.

American Military Police in Europe, 1945–1991

Unit Histories

ROBERT L.

GUNNARSSON, SR.

This text examines the Military Police units from the arrival of the U.S. Constabulary, which was the only law enforcement force on the continent. It provides unit histories, discusses the advancement of law and order programs, and covers the provision of nuclear weapons security, customs regulations and traffic enforcement.
